Chapter 217: After Battles

In Chapter 217, the Gladiator's Arenas have become a popular spectacle, where both participants and spectators experience unique benefits. After the battles, regardless of victory or defeat, participants are teleported back to their domains.

For the winners, the rewards are substantial, with leveling up becoming a powerful incentive for their participation. This process strengthens their powers, making them even more formidable as they continue to rise through the ranks.

On the other hand, even the losers are not left without gain. The system ensures that the defeated participants still receive extra pity-points, providing them with some form of compensation. These points could be used to further enhance their abilities or gain access to other perks, making it a win-win situation for everyone involved.

This arrangement not only encourages more participation but also maintains the excitement and competition within the Gladiator's Arenas. The balance between challenge and reward ensures that the system remains fair and enticing for all those who enter the arenas, keeping the stakes high and the participants eager to engage.